Incident and accident reports - event cards for ordering

Purpose

The purpose of this resource is to demonstrate to learners the internal structure of an incident or accident report. Additionally, learners will develop sequencing and comprehension skills. Both of these skills will support learners' ability to write clear and concise incident and accident reports.

Instructions

1. Print and cut out one set of cards for each group.
2. Provide a set to each table and ask the group to put these into order.
3. Once finished, ask learners to look at the other groups.
4. Finally, discuss the report and its structure. Ask learners if it could be improved, if the sequence is a clear overview of events or if any parts could be removed.

Incident and accident reports – event cards for ordering

At 5:15 on Wednesday morning David, John and I were shifting the stock from one of the top paddocks to the front.

John was teaching David to follow up the cattle, and I trailed behind while David drove the cattle on foot. David was attempting to rush the cattle and swung his alkathene piping so it made a whipping sound.

John told David to slow down and stop agitating the stock but David continued to do it.

David yelled in pain as this happened. Once free, he informed us that his ribs were sore. John took David to A & E to get an x-ray.

As the cows moved passed, David got caught between the cows and the post. He was caught between the post and the cow for several seconds.

Before all the cattle were through the fence, David moved forward and stood next to the strainer post.
